Vassar College realizes that financing an education can be a rather complex and confusing decision for families. As an entering college student you and your family will be inundated, if you haven’t already, with loan information from many sources. We have found that much of the information families receive at this time of the year can be misleading as to the best rates and terms for student and parent education loans.

All borrowers will be offered federal loans through the William D. Ford Direct Loan Program. Loans are available to students and parents, with low interest rates and flexible repayment options. The Direct Loan Program eliminates the need to select a financial institution from which to borrow; instead the lender is the U.S. Department of Education.

Should the need arise to borrow above the Direct Student Loan limits in order to finance a Vassar education, parents should consider the Direct Parent Loan (PLUS). If the parent is denied a PLUS loan, limited additional loan eligibility is available to students, and students should discuss their options with our office. If resources are still needed beyond federal loans, some Vassar families have found alternative loan products to be helpful as a loan of last resort. Vassar College has a policy of refraining from an exclusive partnership with a single lender; we do not endorse or recommend any lender in particular. The lenders listed on the ELMSelect website have been used by other Vassar students in the past year. These are non-government loans with either the student or parent as the primary borrower and generally require a co-signer. The basis for the interest rates of these products differs among lenders. A comparison of these interest rates (prime rate versus 3 month Libor) can be found at http://www.forecasts.org/interest-rate/index.htm. For additional information, you should also visit the individual lenders websites.

Note: The Direct Parent Loan (PLUS) has a provision for loan forgiveness in the event that either the parent or student dies or suffers 100% disability. This is not offered by private student loans where a co-signer is required for the student.

Students have an additional $2,000 Unsubsidized Direct Student Loan eligibility that is not listed on the Statement of Financial Aid. Please see the Outside Scholarship Survey Form for instructions on how to apply.
